RENO, Nev.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Oct. 4, 2004--ArTec, Inc., (Pink Sheets: ATKJ - News) A Pharmaceutical Company, announces the Olympic winning spirit of Tubercin in saving the life of a Greek student with acute cancer. On Aug. 28, 2004, The Maeil Shinmun, (www.imaeil.com) a South Korea newspaper carried an article about Dr. Tai Ho Chung, M.D. Ph.D. and Tubercin saving the life of a 17 year old Greek suffering from a rare form of fatal cancer in Athens where the Olympics was being held. Vasilios-Ioannis Manousakis was able to attend the Olympics and cheer his favorite teams during the Olympics.

V. I. Manousakis contracted intra-abdominal desmoplastic round cell tumor, which is a rare cancer effecting 200 patients all over the world and is a deadly disease and a type of pancreatic cancer. On a mission of mercy, the father of the patient contacted Dr. Tai Ho Chung, M.D. Ph.D., ArTec, Inc.'s Scientific Advisor and Principal Partner.

The father is professor Arkadios Manousakis, age 50, who is an eminent physicist at Athens National University. Since then this case has been the talk of the town culminating in a newspaper article on the front page in the South Korea newspaper The Maeil Shinmun, "Medicine with love from Daegu saved a Greek," Aug. 28, 2004 (www.imaeil.com).

Before treatment, the cancer had metastasized in the liver and spread in the peritonal cavity. No one could predict his life expectancy. After successful Tubercin treatment, Dr. Tai Ho Chung relates, "The patient went to the stadium to support the teams and in an interview with the reporter, the patient mentioned he had recovered to 70% of his normal state."

Artec, Inc. desires to make Tubercin available to all the V. Manousakis of the world, now and later. The entire article, translated into English, will be available on ArTec, Inc.'s web site.
